

Fernando Carrera Ramírez has a BA in geography and history, specializing in prehistory (Universidad Complutense de Madrid, 1987), a degree in conservation of archaeological materials (Escuela Nacional de Conservación y Restauración de Bienes Culturales. Madrid, 1987), and a PhD in history (Universidad Nacional de Educación a Distancia, Madrid, 2005). He is currently reSred from the teaching acSvity (ConservaSon of archaeological materials) at the Higher School of ConservaSon and RestoraSon of Galicia, dedicaSng exclusively to research acSvity. His main professional interest has always been the conservaSon of archaeological sites, parScularly of those possessing prehistoric art, the subject of his PhD thesis (conservaSon of painSngs in megalithic monuments in the Northwest of the Iberian Peninsula).